Description

Picture this: You wake up to birdsong in a proper Italian villa. Not some sterile rental, but a home with soul. Villa Nina sits in the quiet hills of Anacapri, ten minutes from Capri's buzz when you want it, worlds away when you don't.

The kitchen tells you everything. Hand-painted tiles, wooden cabinets worn smooth by decades of use, a massive table where eight people can argue about pasta. The living room flows straight into the garden. No barriers. Just space.

Outside is where this place shines. A pool that actually gets used, not just photographed. A proper stone oven for pizza nights. Two gazebos: one for long dinners under the stars, another for afternoon naps. The garden produces actual lemons. You'll make limonce...
